

For Our Dental Patients:

A normal dental procedure involves a complete oral exam, ultrasonic scaling of the teeth, polishing the teeth, rinsing the mouth, and an application of an oral cleaning solution.

During the dental procedure, a tooth that is loose, cracked, infected and/or abscessed is often encountered. It is highly recommended by our veterinarians that these teeth either be removed during the procedure or have a future root canal performed. Root canals can be done on the major “chewing teeth” if so desired, and if the tooth is not abscessed. A specialist in the field performs these procedures at a later date.

The additional cost for a simple extraction starts at $18.00-$30.00 per tooth. Please ask our staff if you have any questions regarding these procedures.

___YES, please have the doctor extract any diseased teeth.

___NO, please do not extract any diseased teeth. I understand that this may cause future complications with my pet’s health including severe pain, oral infections, and possible multi-organ disease.
